I am so excited that finally raw milk in this country may soon be legalized. I have lived and worked in France and Italy for over 20 years, where raw milk and its products are sold in abundance. Apart from the incredible flavour of some of these exquisite products, the goodness they give us is irreplaceable by so many over processed products flooding the market today. From my experience they actually aid digestion, allergies and enhance a general sense of well being including boosting the immune system. Children in these European countries are so often cured with childhood illnesses using these raw products that have not been boiled, treated, modified and generally bastardized. My son grew up on these products and is a healthy 17 year old today.

With modern day intelligence the very few risks involved consuming these raw products can so easily be addressed on a large scale that they can only bring goodness to our diets and general health today.....something which required grave attention.
