I'm completely and absolutely in favour of having the choice to buy raw milk in Australia. In fact i was shocked to find that I wasn't able to make that choice for myself a few years ago.

While i can appreciate the safety arguments put forward, I have also read specific and documented studies demonstrating the minimal health issues that have come about in places (like california) where raw milk is available for purchase.

I look forward to a time very son where along with the various sim/lite "milk" on the shelves, I'll be able to buy real milk that actually contributes to my wellbeing.
