To whom it concerns,

I demand the right to know what is in the food I purchase from the supermarket and all such places. If any of it contains a GM ingredient, I don't want to consume it.

I don't want to eat GM foods but if someone else isn't concerned, they can buy it.

I want the right, I want the choice to buy or not buy food that has a GM ingredient. Please respect that.

As a consumer, I expect FSANZ to do its duty to make labelling of any GM ingredient known.

Why should it be up to the consumer to contact a product manufacturer and have to ask them if they have used anyGM ingredient because FSANZ won't declare they must be labelled if any GM ingredient is in the product ??

I suspect the known use of a GM ingredient would harm the manufacturer's sales of that product and they certainly do not want it known for that important reason.

Why on earth would FSANZ not order GM food to be labelled ??? Such a position really concerns me.

Yours sincerely,
