Question:

When were consumers asked for input into the review of the retail sale of unpasturised milk? Every? On what basis was the decision made? Were consumers ever brought into the process? I and my family wholly endorse the availability of clearly marked unpasturised milk. So long as consumers are given all the available information, they should be permitted to choose. I have discussed this issue with extremely capable experts who assure me that the operations of dairy herds obviate the "risk" banning is meant to cover. Sincerely. CS
