I would like to voice mine and my family's objection to the proposal to extend the irradiation of fresh produce in Australia.
The timing of the changes, in the lead up to Christmas and in a pandemic is not helpful. It seems the general public are being kept in the dark.
This treatment has not been necessary to date and I believe that we don't know enough about the health effects to warrant the extent proposed. The public awareness of this proposal is low. Why are we not hearing about it in mainstream media?
We also do not have the labelling laws to protect us from these foods already if we choose to not eat them. Will that change?

Kind Regards
